Removing Monuments and Memorials from Public Lands

A short history of the Tennessee Historical Commission and the Tennessee Heritage Protection Act. A discussion of the long and winding road to get approval to: (1) remove, rename, relocate, alter, rededicate, or otherwise disturb a memorial located on public property; or, (2) sell, transfer or otherwise dispose of a memorial, or public property that contains a memorial.

A Fine Line: The Distinction Between Compliance and the Practice of Law

This session will explore the discipline of compliance with respect to the practice of law. Since compliance is an inherent part of the practice of law, a compliance officer's role can often become blurred with role of internal legal counsel, especially as it relates to one's administrative practice. What are the most effective and discrete roles for legal and compliance? This session will bring clarity to this question and greater distinction to that fine line.

Travis Brown, Tennessee Attorney General's Office

Lawyers and Social Media...What Could Possibly Go Wrong?

The explosion of the use of social media by lawyers has resulted in sometimes unintended ethical violations. Many states are now issuing ethics opinions regarding the ethical use of social media in lawyering. This presentation will cover mistakes made by lawyers in the area of social media from violations of confidentiality and other ethical duties to creating unintended lawyer client relationships.

Laura Chastain, Board of Professional Responsibility of the Supreme Court of Tennessee
